

This semester I invite you to learn...

To encounter thinkers that will change you,
To sit with big ideas and let them stir,
To slow down and feel the weight of something good.

I invite you to read hard things,
To write beautiful words with pen,
To work through arguments on paper.

I invite you to meet new friends,
To explore their perspectives,
To dialogue with sincerity and curiosity.

I invite you to be humble and patient and honest.

In this world increasingly obsessed with shallow speed and performative polish, I invite you to do the messy, authentic, and very human work of understanding.

Sincerely,
